A Poor Reason

The benevolent old gentleman had once been a good cricketer, and even now took a lively interest in the national game. It should be fostered, he would never tire of asserting, wherever it was played, no matter under what conditions: so that, passing along one of the worst streets of a stunted one day, and finding a game in progress, he could not resist standing awhile and watching it.

Soon he became aware of certain faults in the umpire's ruling, and he stationed that official about the matter.

"I see," he said, "that your batsman has been bowled, caught and stumped, but, nevertheless, does not go out. Why is that?"

"Oh, 'im' was the umpire's reply. "It stays in as long as 'e likes' it."

"Why is that?" queried the old gentleman again. "Is he the owner of the bat, or is he a bully?"

"Neither, sir," said the archbishop, "but 'is father is a bobby—that's why'."

And then the old gentleman understood.

No consistent vegetarian has a right to wear mutton-chop whiskers.

DON'T LET THAT COUGH ROB YOU OF SLEEP

You probably know all too well how it goes. Just as you doze off, the tickling starts in your throat. A gentle cough, still asleep. A harder cough, and then another. First thing you know, you're wide awake, coughing your head off.

A few nights of that and you're so worn out and weakened that the cough takes a tight grip on you.

But why endure this? Dr. Du-Croix's Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne will soothe the irritating tickling, loosen the phlegm and cure the inflammation of the mucous membrane. It not only stops the cough quickly, allowing you to get sound, refreshing sleep, but it goes to the root of the trouble and drives out the cold completely. Children willingly take Du-Croix's Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, because it tastes so good. Your Druggist has it or can quickly get it for you in 25c. and 50c. bottles. ## COMMUNICATION

To the Editor

DEAR SIR:—

May I encroach on your valuable space to bring before the farmers of this district the claims of the Crossfield Agricultural Society.

To begin with, I have found generally that most of the farmers seem to think that having paid one subscription, amounting to one dollar, they have become practically life members with no further liabilities. This, of course, is entirely erroneous; this subscription is an annual one of one dollar, which becomes due on the first day of December every year.

The Provincial Government gives grant to the Society of one dollar for each member, provided the membership is 150 or more. I would most emphatically point out that to carry out the aims of the Society in a proper manner it is absolutely necessary for the farmers of the district to support the Society by becoming members.

The benefits that accrue are such that no farmer can afford to ignore them. And I feel sure that when once the matter is brought to their attention they will see to it that the Society which started so well, and which is now entering its fourth year, will not lack for the support which should justly be given it.
There can be no question but that it would be very regrettable, indeed, if through the supineness, and lack of interest of the farmers of this district the Society should be allowed to lapse.

It is well known that the Society has held two successful fairs, and certainly from the general turnout of the people of the district on those days it would seem that the interest taken is all that could be desired, but that is not all tenable fairs to be held. We must have a respectable number of members, and when I tell you that for this populous, ever growing and intensely enlightened district of Crossfield the membership falls far below one hundred. I think you will agree with me that it is highly necessary to urge the claims of the Society upon every resident in the district, who has the good of the district at heart.

I beg to point out that the annual general meeting takes place at Crossfield in the L.O.O.F. Hall on Saturday, Dec. 9th inst., at 3 p.m., when it is urgently requested that all members or intending members will make a point of being present.
At this meeting officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space, I have the honor to be one of the DIRECTORS.

Pulpwood Consumption—'10

Nearly six hundred thousand cords of wood were ground into wood-pulp by fifty-one pulp mills operating throughout Canada, during 1910. Statistics compiled by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior show that the total value of this wood was three million, five hundred and eighty-five thousand dollars, and that it was converted into four hundred and seventy-five thousand tons of wood-pulp. Quebec is the premier pulpwood province of Canada because of its extensive spruce and balsam forests suitable for pulpwood. The twenty-five pulp mills in Quebec reported the consumption of fifty-seven per cent.
of the total for Canada, or twenty-three thousand cords more than in 1909. Ontario like wise increased the amount consumed in its fifteen pulp mills by over twenty thousand cords and used over one-third of the total consumption, forming with Quebec, ninety-two per cent.
of the total. The mills of Nova Scotia consumed nearly thirty cords.
New Brunswick used barely onefifty, as much as in 1909, contributing in that year fifteen per cent. of the total. In 1910 the amount used was only two per cent.
of the total, due chiefly to the closing of one large plant. The average of pulpwood in 1910 was six dollars per cord, and Quebec was the only province in which the price was less in 1910 than in 1909.
The price in this province fell off thirty-five cents to five dollars and a half per cord. The highest price paid was in Ontario where it averaged seven dollars, while pulpwood from Nova Scotia at four dollars and sixty cents per cord was the cheapest.

The Power of Steam

A Story Showing How It May Be Used as a Weapon of Defense

By Jack Tomlinson

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911

Many people nowadays consider the peril of the sea to be due to the sea alone. The title of piracy—being wrecked on a shore and falling into the hands of savages or being eaten by cannibals—is supposed now to belong to the past. This is not the case. There are pirates today on the coast of China and on the Malay archipelago, and as for falling into the hands of savages, and that within twelve months past, I have such a story to tell myself.

I was second officer of the American tramp steamer Kreylin Hope. We were running along the coast of British East Africa, giving the shore as we thought a wide berth, beaten by a high wind and seas off the Indian ocean.

It was very early in the morning that the wind suddenly ceased. And it was lucky that it did so, for our bow ran under a coral and sand beach. We tried to back off, but our engines were not strong enough, and we were obliged to wait for daylight in order to get away from the beach.

When the dawn came we found ourselves on the shore of an uninhabited island. We at once set about cutting our keel anchors and making other preparations to pull us off. I was ordered to go ashore with a crew of six men and try for some game that we might have fresh meat. We found plenty of wild animals and birds on the island and were fast at the supply of both when we heard a shout from the man we had left on the shore with the boat. Hurrying to the beach, we saw five black canoes, each containing some forty negroes, pulling toward the Kreylin Hope.

Of course we got into our boat at once and raced with the blacks for the vessel. When they saw that we would reach it before them they lay on their backs and continued themselves with us, moving our movements.

They watched us all the afternoon and our captain concluded that they were waiting for the darkness, when they would attack us, and if they captured our ship we would all doubtless be murdered. We searched the coast for arms, and all we found was a shot-gun, a rifle and two revolvers. We had a dozen white women aboard and a mixture of copper-colored men, mostly Malays. Late in the afternoon the blacks sent a boat toward us, probably to draw our fire and discover how strong we were. At the sight of the negro warriors our Admiral howled with fright that the captain ordered them all below. We did not gratify the blacks by firing at them.

Our chance for our lives looked very small. Our armament would afford no defense such to our white crew. As for the rest, they were not worth anything. Suddenly I thought of a weapon that would serve us better than powder and ball. We had it in the hold aboard, and it occurred to me to couple it to the boilers and fight the blacks with steam.

What frightened our men was that some of them remembered that several years ago a French ship had gone ashore on this or another island on this very part of the coast, and the natives had massacred all on board. The outlook with a couple of hundred black devils waiting for night in case to treat us in the same way was to say the least, not reassuring, especially since our principal weapon was steam. We estimated that it would be high tide about 9 o'clock in the evening. If we weren't captured before that there was a possibility of our sliding off into deep water. Then free we could put on steam and sail away without molestation. But the blacks knew this as well as we, and they were likely to delay their attack till the tide helped us off.

Fortunately the weather, which had been thick when we struck and continued thick, cleared at sunset, and there was a three-quarter moon in the east.

We had counted on this to help us even more than the tide, for with its light we could see our enemies. With that it they could climb to our decks under cover of the darkness and overpower us by force of numbers.

Our luckiest find in the way of defense was some barrels we were stowed away in the cargo. We stretched it around the guano. We didn't consider it sufficient to keep off an enemy, but excellent for putting them off. We put two rows, one above the other, from stern to midships in order to make it easier for our men to attack us aft, thus concentrating them on our advantage.

We had two couplings on the boilers and these engines to run any part of the ship from both couplings. By sunset we had all our dispositions made. The captain was in command. The first officer was to run the pumps and I the starboard hose. The arms were distributed among the white crew. The Asiatas were kept in the hold.

As the evening approached they began to creep to be let out, not relishing the prospect of this raid on a trap. And they also feared that the blacks might set the ship afire or let the water in on them to drown them. We paid all attention to them, and they finally became more quiet.

Long before the sun surrendered the day to the moon we had everything in readiness to repel boarders. Openings were left in the fencing, which was closely woven, with a barb on the round iron and hid it. As it was being obscured we saw every canoe pulled furiously toward us.

We seemed to see that the five white men opposed to more than three times their number of strong men armed with spears they were used to handling, besides probably some of our arms, had a very small chance for our lives. We were supported, however by faith in our arrangements for their reception, and if we could reach them, with our steam jets we had confidence in its power to harm them considerably. Now and again while our enemies were pulling toward us a thin part of the cloud passing over the moon would give us some light. The coming canoes and their loads were black as Erebus, though here and there we would see a flash when the moonlight struck a shield or a steel weapon. Now came the black devils till the canoes reached a point a cable's length from us. Two pulled to port, two to starboard and one toward the stern.

I wondered how they proposed to board us, for we had been careful to leave nothing hanging over their heads, and if we could reach them, we and under our stern we learned their method. They were provided with ropes of their own making of what material I did not know—and at the end of each was a sort of V made from a forking branch, one side being free to form a hook. They on some cable near enough that they began to throw these V's to catch on the guano. The first one was thrown and we went to in good stead. The blacks found it impossible to get an attack except at the openings we had prepared for our own escape. Standing at my post with my nose, I saw one of the canoes come toward me, and its crew, seeing a single man apparently unarmored to defend the opening, pulled directly under me. One of them threw a V, which caught on the guano, and a black came quickly up, climbing hand over hand.

I gave him a dose of steam right in the face.

With a wild shriek, he dropped into the boat. I dared not remain exposed to a spear from above, however, but, sighting the position of the boat, I reached out with the nozzle to my hand and poured a stream of hot vapor into it. Knowing by their yells that they were in distress, I made bold to lean over the ship's side and turn the stream from one end of the canal to the other.

For awhile the blacks were too paralyzed to act; then every one who had not been severely scalded jumped into the water, leaving the wounded in the boat to drift away. Of course as soon as they were put out of the fight I desisted.

Meanwhile the first officer was having a similar experience with the blacks on the yells coming from that direction. I had no sooner driven off my enemies than I was ordered by the captain to the stern, where several blacks had already climbed up and were jumping down on our deck. I did not need to go to them. I simply turned a steam jet on them. Some fell off the deck; others managed to get over the tailrail and down into their canoe or the water.

So as to every port we achieved an easy victory without firing a shot. Great is the power of steam. Since our triumph on the African coast by our other weapon I have wondered if the navy would not use steam boilers with hose attachments in fortifications for the close work. Might it not be made as effective as a Gatling gun?

As we saw the canoes pulling away to get rid of the dreadful hot water we felt our ship sliding off the reef. A sheer bolt for the victory and for the friendly tide that had freed us went up, doubtless the greatest noise from the mingling of human voices that had ever been heard on that silent shore. In a few minutes we were in deep water, and instead of using our steam to scald negroes we moved away under its power.

I've been through hurricanes and been wrecked on a deserted island, but never in all my sailor life have I been so scared as when those blacks were waiting for darkness to come aboard and murder us.

The Food Question

Collier's (Canadian edition) of August 20th contains an article entitled "Westfield. A Pure Food Town," which is sure to be interesting to all housekeepers. The people of Westfield (Mass.) woke up to the fact that they were not getting pure food, or pure material for use in food. They do not want and now will make them look nice, etc. Of the groceries tested in the laboratory of the most frequently adulterated is baking powder. A delightful concoction, known as a tart proved to be pure, made with alum, with a jelly center dyed with coal-tar. The article goes on to say: "So little baking powder is used in some homes that this product would seem comparatively unimportant. But a great deal of baking powder, however, is used in the bought, cake and biscuits, and a very large amount of this adulterated." The adulteration may be by ammonia, which is fraudulent but not injurious, or by alum, which is decidedly injurious, as it hardens the tissues of the mucous membranes. As a precaution, however, I am recommending that the ingredients be stated. Better refuse it if alum or something that looks like it is in the list of ingredients. ## TOO MUCH ALTOGETHER

HON. C. J. DOHERTY COULDN'T STEAL A MAN'S BED.

Career of New Minister of Justice Has Been a Remarkable One in Many Respects—Few Men Give Up a Judgeship at the Age of Fifty to Take Up the Uncertainties of Politics—Friend of Everything Irish.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, the new Minister of Justice, went to a well-known apartment house in Ottawa where he arrived to take up his official duties and asked for a bachelor suite until such time as his family should arrive, says Saturday Night. He was shown to a certain apartment by the janitor and was proceeding to make himself comfortable for the night, when he heard unmistakable sounds of heavy breathing from the bedroom, off the sitting-room. He opened the door and peeped in, and to his surprise a vigorous sleeper was none other than William Stevens Fielding, ex-Minister of Finance.

"Look here," said Mr. Doherty to the janitor, "I don't mind turning a man out of office but I can't very well turn him out of bed!"

It is given to few lawyers to have had a successful career at the Bar and then on the Bench, and to be able to retire still with but little more than fifty years of age.

That is what Hon. Mr. Doherty has done. The fact that although he is a retired judge he is still in the public life explains the reason why, on taking leave of the Bench, he entered upon another career, breathing at a single bound, one of the leading men in the Conservative party.

No man in recent years has caused so much comment and even criticism, on taking up politics, as did Mr. Doherty when he announced that instead of taking the part of an armchair adviser according to the custom of retired judges, he intended to join the conservative party. The success achieved in the breeding of Clydesdales in Canada serves as a good example of what can be accomplished by persistence and expert selection.

The Scottish element of the Dominion's population has been partial to the Clydesdale breed and conversant with the good qualities and utility; hence imported Clydesdale stallions of this breed.

But it was a representative that his thoughts ever turned, and after his first book of poems in 1889 he wrote "The Life of the Bee," and other plays and books by which his name has become world-famous.

The Nobel prizes were instituted by Mr. Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, who left his fortune of nearly $650,000 as a fund for the benefit of persons who in five different fields of progressive activity contributed to the welfare of mankind and the peace of the world.

Mr. Nobel died in 1896, and the late Sir W. R. Crockett, secretary of the International Arbitration League (Peace, 1903). In 1903 the prize was awarded to a woman, the Baroness von Suttner, whose book, "Lay down your arms," was the first to call together the first Peace Conference at The Hague.

Among English prize-winners have been Mr. Ruyard Kipling (Literature, 1907), Major Ronald Ross of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine (Medical research, 1902), and the late Sir W. R. Crockett, secretary of the International Arbitration League (Peace, 1903).

In 1903 the prize was awarded to a woman, the Baroness von Suttner, whose book, "Lay down your arms," was the first to call together the first Peace Conference at The Hague.

Those who criticized his action were men who did not know him—men who pictured a judge as a kind of doddering individual, instead of the alert and virile personality that Mr. Doherty is.

The Conservatives were frankly delighted to have a man of such ripe experience allied to such robust manhood as his, and none were more delighted than Mr. R. L. Borden, who, after Mr. Doherty's election, sat in the ranks of the Opposition, selected him as his right-hand henchman, and a chorus of approval from colleagues and press alike.

A Montebello by birth, Mr. Doherty comes of an old Irish family. He graduated from St. Mary's Jesuit college, took a law course with Fyfe College, and a gold medal at McGill, and within eleven years was selected member of the council of the Bar and created a Queen's Counsel, following this up by taking over the chair of Civil Law at McGill University. Four years after becoming a Q.C. he was raised to the Bench. During his legal career Mr. Doherty officiated in many of the most celebrated cases of the day.

Always a man of exceptional activity, Mr. Doherty has from the first been associated with every movement in Montreal making for the welfare of his Irish compatriots, and he was one of the delegates chosen to go to the Irish National Convention in Dublin in 1885. At one time he held a commission as captain in the 6th Regiment, and he served with that corps in the Rebellion in the Northwest Territories in 1885.

A man of the presence, great culture, and possessed of an attractive air of platform, Mr. Doherty is destined to go far in national politics, especially as since he joined the Conservative party, that party has entered into power.

People Who Don't Laugh. Laughter is unknown among the Veddas of Ceylon. They are the most solemn people in the world. When a traveler asked some of them why their people never gave indication of mirth, they replied that they never saw anything to laugh at.

On the other hand, some savages appear to have a more robust sense of humor than their civilized brethren. Dr. Livingstone tells of an African chief who, when he was asked for the first time, "rolled about on the ground in uncontrollable fits of laughter."

DEVELOPING DRAFTERS.

Sound Mares as Necessary as Pure Breed Stallions.

It requires skill and a liberal system of feeding to rear and develop high grade draft horse for market, writes W. Mitton Kelly in Country Notes.

The way to develop the right kind and mongrel is to very small that it is folly for a man to start the business with a lot of old nondescript mares and depend on the good qualities of the stallion to correct their natural weaknesses and deformities in progeny. The man who knows how to care for and feed his farm teams so that they will keep in good flesh and vigorous condition can afford to invest a few hundred dollars in good brood mares and grow horses for market. The farmer who is in a position to market one or two good draft teams each year has an additional income that is from a much easier and more certain source than many other branches of stock feeding.

After selecting a few well bred mares that are free from all hereditary disease and then with a stallion of one of the leading draft breeds, and one that is not only a good individual, but a true type and representative of his breed. The stallion should not weigh to exceed 5000 pounds more than the mare with which he is to be mated. In all lines of stock breeding, the fact that nature produces a union of widely different types and that it usually produces better results to mate the mare with a stallion in some way near their weight and resembling them in form and general characteristics.

While some farmers are beginning to appreciate the importance of using sound, pure breed stallions, the equal importance of using sound mares is not yet generally understood. When a mare by reason of unsoundness is no longer fit for anything else she often is set aside for breeding purposes, and as long as this absurd and unbusinesslike practice the penalty will be paid in the prevalence of unsound horses on our farms.

The success achieved in the breeding of Clydesdales in Canada serves as a good example of what can be accomplished by persistence and expert selection. The Scottish element of the Dominion's population has been partial to the Clydesdale breed and conversant with the good qualities and utility; hence imported Clydesdale stallions of this breed.

MAETERLINCK HONORED

POET AND PLAYWRIGHT GETS THE NOBEL PRIZE.

Author of the Blue Bird Has Conferred Upon Him the Biggest Prize That Literature Can Offer to a Man of International Reputation—Kipling Was the Prize Winner in 1907—Two Other Britons Honored.

The "Dagens Nyheter" states that this year's Nobel prize for literature goes to the Belgian poet, M. Maurice Maeterlinck.

M. Maeterlinck is, perhaps, best known to the general English-speaking public by his fairy play "The Blue Bird." Like all his work, it unites symbolism with artistic charm. "We all seek happiness, do we not?" said the little girl. "Well, the Blue Bird is happiness—the bird that is never caught. Quite simple; just a matter of finding it."

Maeterlinck has been called the Belgian Shakespeare. Born at Ghent in 1862, he studied law at the university of that city, and became a barrister. But it was a representative that his thoughts ever turned, and after his first book of poems in 1889 he wrote "The Life of the Bee," and other plays and books by which his name has become world-famous.

The Nobel prizes were instituted by Mr. Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite, who left his fortune of nearly $650,000 as a fund for the benefit of persons who in five different fields of progressive activity contributed to the welfare of mankind and the peace of the world.

Mr. Nobel died in 1896, and the late Sir W. R. Crockett, secretary of the International Arbitration League (Peace, 1903). In 1903 the prize was awarded to a woman, the Baroness von Suttner, whose book, "Lay down your arms," was the first to call together the first Peace Conference at The Hague.

Among English prize-winners have been Mr. Ruyard Kipling (Literature, 1907), Major Ronald Ross of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine (Medical research, 1902), and the late Sir W. R. Crockett, secretary of the International Arbitration League (Peace, 1903).

In 1903 the prize was awarded to a woman, the Baroness von Suttner, whose book, "Lay down your arms," was the first to call together the first Peace Conference at The Hague.

Those who criticized his action were men who did not know him—men who pictured a judge as a kind of doddering individual, instead of the alert and virile personality that Mr. Doherty is.

The Conservatives were frankly delighted to have a man of such ripe experience allied to such robust manhood as his, and none were more delighted than Mr. R. L. Borden, who, after Mr. Doherty's election, sat in the ranks of the Opposition, selected him as his right-hand henchman, and a chorus of approval from colleagues and press alike.

A Montebello by birth, Mr. Doherty comes of an old Irish family. He graduated from St. Mary's Jesuit college, took a law course with Fyfe College, and a gold medal at McGill, and within eleven years was selected member of the council of the Bar and created a Queen's Counsel, following this up by taking over the chair of Civil Law at McGill University. Four years after becoming a Q.C. he was raised to the Bench. During his legal career Mr. Doherty officiated in many of the most celebrated cases of the day.

Always a man of exceptional activity, Mr. Doherty has from the first been associated with every movement in Montreal making for the welfare of his Irish compatriots, and he was one of the delegates chosen to go to the Irish National Convention in Dublin in 1885. At one time he held a commission as captain in the 6th Regiment, and he served with that corps in the Rebellion in the Northwest Territories in 1885.

A man of the presence, great culture, and possessed of an attractive air of platform, Mr. Doherty is destined to go far in national politics, especially as since he joined the Conservative party, that party has entered into power.

People Who Don't Laugh. Laughter is unknown among the Veddas of Ceylon. They are the most solemn people in the world. When a traveler asked some of them why their people never gave indication of mirth, they replied that they never saw anything to laugh at.

A MERCILESS LANDLORD.

Clanciarie, Ireland's Greatest Tenant, to Sell His Property.

Nothing so significant has happened in the history of Ireland for many a day as the decision of Lord Clanciarie to sell his estates at Portmarnock, near Dublin, in the heart of the Clanciarie country.

Perhaps no Irish landlord has been more execrated than Lord Clanciarie, and certainly none has deserved it more. When others were reducing rents, and even allowing them to lapse, Lord Clanciarie exacted the utmost farthing and evicted and burned with fire and sword those who were not forthcoming. His estate has been in a condition of actual war thirty years.

How pitiless he was is proved by the fact that the men of his own class even refused to associate with him. Things were made so unpleasant for him he was not seen in the House of Lords for many years, and when he did make his appearance a couple of years ago to vote on a division of great importance to his class he was shunned by every one.

A great English landlord, Lord St. Aldwyn, who is better known by his former title of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, even went so far in a debate as to declare that Clanciarie's vote in favor of a measure was so unpleasant that he would rather vote against it than a dozen votes against it, and he denounced him as a disgrace to land-lordship.

Clanciarie has not been in Ireland for at least thirty years, and probably for a longer time. He had not even the courage to face his tenants, but left that dangerous work to his agents, and more than once resigned rather than carry out his orders.

He once visited London, occupying himself by collecting pictures and other things. Although a wealthy man, he probably spends less on himself than most clerks, and few of the people who meet him would know that he is nearly a century old walking along Piccadilly every fine morning. He is a little old, but he is as hale as the worst landlord ever Ireland ever produced is known to all the world.

The pity is that Clanciarie is the last of a race that has been great in Ireland nearly 700 years, and some of whose members nobly served this country. His name is Hubert George de Burgh Canning, but the "Canning" was added to his name in 1865. He is therefore the head of the great Burke family.

He was in the race in Ireland was Richard de Burgh, who was lord lieutenant in 1227, and who received the title of Earl of Connaught. His son became Earl of Ulster, and four generations later the present title was created. Other branches of the family are the Earls of Mayo and Viscounts of Galway.

There isn't any doubt that Lord Clanciarie has made up his mind to sell his estates because he sees that his time is long past. He knows he will receive much less consideration from an Irish purchaser than he will in making a bargain with the congested districts commissioners, to whom he has promised his willingness to consider a fair offer.

Story of Self Help. A man who has been his working career as a scissor-grinder in Sheffield, England, has just received a wage of only $6 a week, has just died of $100,000, and has left bequests of $2,000,000 to various charitable institutions of the city.

He was Mr. David Phipps, glass and china merchant, the proprietor of a very large business, which he acquired as a result of hard work and thrifty habits, and which his wife managed.

When he was earning his small wage the couple always managed to get on. For example, the wife had a little capital they started a small general grocery business in a back street. At the same time he was carrying on a business as furniture remover, his wife looking after the shop.

He was afterwards able to move to bigger premises and became a wealthy man. His wife managed to live on a very moderate style.

Defying the Dictionary. George Eliot and Horace Walpole introduced the strange word "greenish" in place of "greenery" in "The Mysteries of Udolpho." "Kist" and "drest" and is said to have signed his name in sixteen different ways. He was a little of the kind of such terms as "sensational" and "pitiable." Even Queen Victoria often spelled separately "separate." Dickens introduced the most eccentric punctuation when writing "Pickwick."

Jane Austen was very partial to the use of the word "excessively" when she obviously meant "exceedingly." The critics have accused Mrs. Marie Corelli of using "perspicuity" instead of "perspicacity."

Blind Justice. We meet one phibopious friend and observe that he is smiling contentedly. "What has gone wrong now?" we ask.

"Nothing has gone wrong," he explains. "Something has gone wrong. I've signed my name in sixteen different ways. He was a little of the kind of such terms as "sensational" and "pitiable." ### Geo. O. Davis

CROSSFIELD, ALTA.

Correspondence

Crossfield, Nov. 29th, 1911

To the Editor.

Dear Sir:—

I see that the pound bye-law was again taken up yesterday, and I wonder why our policeman does not clean the streets of dogs as well as cattle.

There dogs running at large that are a positive disgrace and a nuisance as well. I often see ladies stop and shove dogs off the side-walks, which I never see them do with cows. And again, dogs will come into a yard and attack cattle right at the door. What kind of a fence would a person have to have in order to hold cattle when other people's dogs come in your yard after your cow?

Hoping Mr. Editor that the Council will take some action on this matter, and that I am not taking up too much of your space,

I remain,

TAX PAYER.

Editor's Note:—For Tax Payer's benefit, it might be said that the ordinary town cow is a very docile animal very easily handled, while it is always more less risky to touch a strange dog.

Giving Good for Evil

A traveler struck our thriving town the first of the week, and I of course put up at the Alberta Hotel.

After spending the night, and perhaps over-sleeping, he arose to make his toilet, and finding that his water jug had accidentally been left unfilled, he at once started a noise that aroused the rest of the guests, abusing everyone who came within the sound of his voice. He was allowed to rave for a while, and when it came time to pay his reckoning, he was informed by Mr. Barter that considering the disturbance that he had created his money was of no use to the house, and was allowed to go on his way rejoicing, for had he not saved the price of a night's lodging?

Moral:—"It beats the band how mean some men are."

He Will Be Here

In conversation with Mr. Frank Lloyd, the well-known comedian, the fact was mentioned that the Saskatoon "Phoenix" in a recent write-up, stated that his face was undoubtedly his fortune. Mr. Lloyd naively remarked, "That's why I'm broke." Anyway, Mr. Lloyd is not shy in coming back, and supported by his own splendid Company, will appear in the I.O. O. F. Hall Crossfield, on Thursday, Dec. 21st. Plan of Hall at the Drug Store.
